

Paris Lights Up

Est parisien • Actualités bilingues • Eastern Paris • Bilingual news

January 2021: A colorful start to the New Year with these art exhibits in Eastern Paris

Museums will have to wait to reopen their doors, but thankfully Parisian galleries are still here to bring a touch of culture to start this new year. From the banks of Canal Saint-Martin to the cobbled streets of Le Marais, we'll be your guide for this month's selection of art exhibits!

Karolina Orzełek – “Lull after the storm” Until January 30th

The hike, 2020 – Artwork featured in the exhibit “Lull after the storm” at galerie Sabine Bayasli © Karolina Orzełek

After participating in the collective project “Endless Summer” in 2020, artist Karolina Orzełek is back at the galerie Sabine Bayasli with a solo exhibition that we are looking forward to discovering! Originally from Bielsko-Biała in Poland and now a Parisian, the painter was recently awarded the 2020 Sisley – Beaux Arts de Paris prize for young creatives.

Nostalgia for a chimeric elsewhere, deserted yet bewitching beaches, plants that seem to adapt to their environment like chameleons: a change of scenery is guaranteed through Karolina Orzełek's oils on panels. Get ready to push the door of a mysterious country in which colors and lights no longer obey the same rules.

Tuesday to Saturday: 2pm-7pm – Free admission

Galerie Sabine Bayasli, 99 Rue du Temple, 75003 Paris
galleriesabinebayasli.com